ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I would like to thank the members of my committee for their time and guidance on this project and especially my teacher Dennis Parker. I would like to thank Kevork Mardirossian for his support. I would like to thank my dear friends Bo and Aaron for their tremendous help in so many ways. I couldn't have done it without you! Special thanks to all the individual composers and music resource centers for their quick response and valuable information. Thanks to Maestro Mariusz Smolij for his help with the Polish translation. Special thanks to Lee Armstrong for emailing me his extensive database of cello ensemble music.

ABSTRACT

This document contains over 700 entries of cello ensemble music written in the twentieth and the beginning of the twenty-first centuries by 530 composers from around the world. Pieces presented in this catalogue are largely original works. A few exceptions have been allowed mostly when the composer arranged his/her own piece. For each entry, as much of the available information as possible is provided in the following general order: composer name, composer dates, title of piece, approximate duration, and availability. Under a section named “remarks,” additional information is provided such as number and titles of the movements, first performance, sound recordings, record locator numbers, dedications, and other notes by the composer. The document also contains the following appendices: list of the publishers and music centers holding said entries and an alphabetical list of the composers.

INTRODUCTION

The history of cello ensemble writing goes back to the birth of the cello as an instrument. One of the first cello ensemble pieces is the Canon for two Cellos written in 1689 by Domenico Gabrielli, who is considered one of the three earliest composers to write solo cello literature.¹ More evidence of the early existence of cello ensemble music is found in the treatise “Twelve Duetts for Two Violoncellos, with some Observations & Rules for playing that instrument” dating c. 1780 by Johann Schetky.² Since that time, composers from around the world have been attracted to that genre not only for educational purposes, but also for its qualities and possibilities in performance. Cello ensemble writing was wide spread in the Baroque era. Such composers as Johann Sebastian Bach (12 cello duets), Jean Barriere (Sonata in G major for two cellos), and Luigi Boccherini (sonatas), wrote several pieces in the genre. Later, cello virtuosi in the early Classical period, such as Julius Klengel and David Popper, wrote numerous ensemble works for their instrument. The tradition continued through the nineteenth century.

In the twentieth century, the cello received renewed interest and recognition as an instrument. Likewise, cello-ensemble writing also experienced a renaissance. Composers from different parts of the world such as Latin America (Villa Lobos – Bachianas Brasileiras) and Eastern Europe (Lazar Nikolov – Metamorphoses No. 4 for 12 cellos) made significant contribution to the cello-ensemble writing. Many of those new works, however, are little known and difficult to find. Some are not even published and are only available from the composer's personal library. If a student or a professional cellist wanted to find new works for multiple cellos, they would be forced to search the stacks of a library or a compact disk store in hopes of stumbling across desired literature through blind luck. The purpose of this study is to provide a comprehensive source for pieces written by twentieth-century composers from around the world for cello ensembles of all sizes. Cello ensembles vary between 2 (called duet) and 12 cellos (duzet). The document is designed to serve the following purposes: introduce the contemporary cello player to the vast number of pieces from around the world written for cello ensemble; provide a list of composers who wrote in that genre; display the myriad choices of repertoire for any number of cellos; and provide some additional information assisting performers in locating said selections.

The structure of the catalogue consists of a main body and appendices. The main body contains the catalogue entries. Those are organized according to the size of the ensemble and alphabetically by the composer's last name within each section. Each entry includes as much of the available information as possible with the following general order: composer name, composer dates, title of the piece (including an English translation where applicable), composition date, approximate duration, and availability. In a section named "Remarks," additional helpful information is listed, such as number and titles of the movements, dedications, available recordings, publishing company catalogue number, first performances, and other notes by the composer. In addition to the list of sources consulted to compile all the information, the document contains the following useful appendices: an alphabetical list of the composers and an alphabetical list of publishing companies, including addresses, contact numbers, websites, and emails.

This document will be a valuable music literature source for performers and teachers. It will allow cellists to discover and locate repertoire, which can then be programmed for concerts or used for educational purposes. Virtually all of the pertinent information about each work will be available to amateurs, students, teachers, and concert artists in this single, organized resource.

VITA

A native of Plovdiv, Bulgaria, Ivan Antonov started playing the cello at the age of five. His first cello teacher was Anastasia Biandova at the Plovdiv Music School. He holds a bachelor's degree in cello performance from the Bulgarian State Academy of Music where he studied with Zdravko Yordanov and a master's degree from the University of Central Arkansas where he studied with Felice Farrell. He is receiving his doctoral degree from Louisiana State University, where he studied with Dennis Parker. Ivan has participated in master classes by Janos Starker, Aldo Parisot, and Carter Brey.

Ivan performs as an Assistant Principal Cello at the Acadiana Symphony Orchestra in Lafayette, Louisiana. He is also the personnel manager of the orchestra and a cello instructor at the Acadiana Symphony Conservatory of Music. In addition, Ivan performs in the cello section of the Baton Rouge Symphony and is an active chamber musician.
