Performance Notes:

The cello solo part for the 'Oration' is exactly the same than as for the 'Poème Élégiique'. The 'Poème Élégiique' has triple string soloists - violin, viola and cello - which after the long opening section for violin and viola soloists the cello soloist generally dominates. In this version the accompanying orchestra is by strings alone. However, the Oration has a chamber orchestral scoring, with two oboes and two horns present - and these subtly help absorb some of the writing of the higher string soloists of the trio work. However, the material of the cello soloist remains identical in both works.

As the first performance of the 'Poème Élégiique' approached in 2010, in rehearsals it was decided mutually by conductor and cello soloist/composer that a very few passages were better placed an octave lower to achieve greater 'elegy' quality and poignancy. These have been corrected in the cello part but not in the main orchestral scores, so please - cello soloists in future please tell your conductors that the composer's wish is that it sounds exactly as you find it in the registers of the cello soloist part!

Enjoy the music!
